

The Problem with Work

Kathi Weeks

Thursday, April 18 • 5:00 p.m. - 6:30 p.m.
Cathedral of Learning 602

Bio:

Kathi Weeks teaches in the Women's Studies Program at Duke University. Her primary interests are in the fields of political theory, feminist theory, Marxist thought, the critical study of work, and utopian studies. She is the author of The Problem with Work: Feminism, Marxism, Antiwork Politics and Postwork Imaginaries (Duke UP, 2011) and Constituting Feminist Subjects (Cornell UP, 1998), and a co-editor of The Jameson Reader (Blackwell, 2000).

Description:

The old metaphor of the unhappy marriage used to characterize the relationship between Marxism and feminism is increasingly inadequate. How can we conceive the links between the Marxist refusal of work and the feminist analysis of the family in ways more relevant to the present? What are the possibilities for and limitations of our visions of nonwork and how are they either matched or overcome by our ideas about alternatives to the family? This talk focuses on the refusal of work, the critique of the family, and the utopian imagination of different futures as the terrain on which to rethink the project of Marxist feminism.

Cultural Studies Graduate Student Colloquium

Friday, April 19th
Cathedral of Learning 602

Session One: 10:00am – 12:00pm

Greeting: Ron Zboray, Director, Graduate Program for Cultural Studies

Introductions: Gabriella Lukacs, Associate Professor of Anthropology

Jeffrey Tienes (SOC), The Production of "Bad Bitches": Accountability and Authentication in Lupe Fiasco's "Bitch Bad"

Maximilian Schuster (EDUC), Infusing Affective Labor in Explanations of Higher Education Staff Turnover

Taylor Hahn (COMM), Digital Readership and Cultural Production in the Comic Book Industry

Cherod Johnson (COMM), Not yet "Out": The Down Low and The Rhetoric of Work and Play

Amber Kelsie (COMM), The Slave and the Scandal of Immaterial Labor

Comments: Kathi Weeks

Session Two: 2:00pm – 4:00pm

Introductions: Gabriella Lukacs

Hernan Medina (HISP), Affect, Subjectivity and the Raw Material in Julio Cortazar's Autonauts of the Cosmoroute

Juliana Enciso (HISP), The Black Sheep of the Flock? Outcast and Neoliberalism in the Graphic Novel V for Vendetta

Derek Griesbach (COMM), The reCAPTCHA of Free Labor: How an Online Verification System Pits Millions of "NetSlaves" against "NetBots" in a Battle for Literacy

Ellen Defossez (COMM), (Re)conceptualizations of Health and Responsibility in the Context of Neoliberalism

Holly Yanacek (GER), Marketing Emotion: Selling Feelings in Neoliberal Germany

Robert Zysk (SOC), Environmental Frames in the Neoliberal Economy

Comments: Kathi Weeks

Conclusion: Ron Zboray

